FAO Food Price Index

The Food and Agricultural Organisation (FAO) Food Price Index¹ averaged 171.0 points in April 2015, down by 2.1 points from its level in March 2015, recording its lowest level since June 2010. The downward impact was mostly observed in dairy products, but prices of sugar, cereals and vegetable oils also declined.

The FAO Cereal Price Index averaged 167.6 points in April 2015, down by 2.2 points from March 2015, primarily driven by a reduction in wheat prices. The sharp fall in wheat prices reflects confirmation of an ample supply during the season and slow trade activity as many buyers await in expectation of even lower prices in the coming months. The FAO Vegetable Oil Price Index averaged 150.2 points in April 2015, down by 1.5 per cent from March 2015. The slide in the index was driven by palm oil, while soy oil increased slightly.

The FAO Dairy Price Index averaged 172.4 points in April 2015, down by 12.5 points from its level in March 2015. Whole milk powder and butter were the main commodities affected. The FAO Meat Price Index averaged 178.0 points in April 2015, up by 3.0 points from its level in March 2015. The rise in prices was mainly reflected in bovine and ovine meat from Oceania, where herd rebuilding restricted exports. The FAO Sugar Price Index averaged 185.5 points in April 2015, down by 2.4 points from March 2015. The decline mainly reflected improved crop prospects in Brazil, the weakening of the Brazilian currency against the US dollar and India's announcement that it would raise sugar import tariffs from 25 per cent to 40 per cent in a bid to support failing domestic prices weighed on international sugar quotations.
